I am confident that by ear-nest and careful attention Congress will be convinced of the wisdom and propriety of the suggestions thus pre-sented, and recommend to Congress the appropriation of the sum named by the eccretary of the navy to be piaced at his disposal at once for expenditure, as soon as witable arrangements can be made suitable arrangements can be made to the proposed end. Ordered princed, and referred to the committee on ap-

The House then proceeded to the consideration of the apportionment bill, without limit on debate. Cox explained and advocated its provisions. Under it the slave states would gain eight and lose twelve members; the middle states would lose three. The old slave states would anyone complained that this was sec-tional or partison, he might calculate the net gains of the north and south twenty years they had doubled their number, leaping from one-tenth of the whole population to one-fifth. Those five states had increased 87 por cent. No states had increased 87 per cent. No state east of the Mississippi had attained 50 per cent, while the Pacific states had gained 58 per cent, during ten years. This country was in every sense republican. The people of the United States had the same greed for gain, ambition to excel, love of rule, desire amount to excel, love of rule, desire for intrigue and play of unruly pre-judice, jealousy and passions that had made the history of other nations tragical even in their decline.
